

GOOD THINGS ALL AROUND

AN EXPLANATION ON BUILDING PERMITS

State and local laws require that building permits be obtained prior to starting most construction projects. By working with a building inspector with a permit you will benefit from their knowledge to ensure your construction project complies with applicable codes. Many permits are free or have minimal cost.

For example, if your construction project does not comply with the applicable codes adopted by the City, the value of your investment could be reduced. If you sell a home or building that has had modifications, the buyer's financing may require evidence of a building permit. Without a permit, you may be required to leave it unoccupied or make costly repairs.

Additionally, it may be helpful for a property owner to demonstrate that permits were obtained and building codes were met, should a lawsuit occur. Furthermore, your permit allows the code official to help protect the public by reducing the potential hazards of unsafe construction.

Permits are required for the following:

- New buildings
- Accessory structures (sheds, awnings, carports)
- Additions (bedrooms, bathrooms, family rooms)
